PAU (Pā'u).

A royal city of Edom, residence of king Hadar. Called Pai in 1 Ch. 1:50.

Ge. 36:39. the name of the city was P.

PAUL—little, from the Latin paulus.

The great apostle to the Gentiles. He is called by his Jewish name of Saul until after the conversion, by his instrumentality, of Sergius Paulus the proconsul of Cyprus. Paul was a Benjamite, born in Tarsus, the chief city of Cilicia. He was born a free Roman citizen, was brought up in the strict observance of the Hebrew faith and traditions, and was educated in Jerusalem under the tutelage of Gamaliel, one of the most learned rabbis of his day. The book of Acts tells of his dramatic conversion and his ardent ministry.

SATAN (Sā'tan)—the adversary.

An evil spirit who appears, first, as a tempter, and occasions the fall of Adam and Eve. The Satan of Job is a restless, mocking spirit who seeks to break down his loyalty to God by causing him to undergo unmerited suffering. In that drama he is counted with the sons of God, and afflicts Job only as he is permitted by God. In the New Testament Satan is lord of the underworld, ruler of demons, and of surpassing intelligence and malice, the name being used interchangeably with 'the devil.' [David
